

Is AI a science, or is it engineering? Or neither or both? Explain.

Science involves rigorously understanding different aspects of the world. Engineering involves leveraging understanding to build useful systems.

AI research is concerned with both understanding and building intelligence so it really is both science and engineering. In fact, in current AI research, it can be hard to do one without the other.

Some would say it's art too but I guess everything is ;)